Biography

Marline Paul is a passionate advocate for empowering women entrepreneurs through strategic business coaching. As CEO of Enilram Creative Solutions, Marline leverages her 17+ years of experience as an educator to provide hands-on guidance to female founders looking to turn their dreams into reality.

After seeing firsthand the lack of specialized support for women-owned startups, Marline founded Enilram to fill this need. Her signature coaching methodology helps clients gain clarity, build confidence, and implement growth strategies tailored to their unique goals and challenges.

Marline also founded Rose of Alpha Omega, Inc., a nonprofit organization empowering women to live spiritually balanced lives through mentorship, leadership development, and community support. Her goal is to transform the perspective of women's entrepreneurship through education and provide a supportive community for women to flourish.

Marline's programs tap into her real-world experience navigating the ups and downs of entrepreneurship as a military spouse. Her motivational yet relatable approach connects on a personal level with clients.

Enilram Creative Solutions focuses on underserved groups like minority, veteran, and women business owners who lack access to traditional entrepreneurial resources.

Marline is committed to building an empowering community where women can find the expertise, accountability, and sisterhood of support needed to excel on their own terms. Her customized coaching and training guide clients to business mastery.

When she's not coaching, Marline enjoys spending time with family, serving as a Boy Scout den leader, learning about new technologies like AI, and supporting the Nasdaq Entrepreneurial Center Milestone Circle Program. Her hands-on approach and passion for helping women thrive make Marline an inspiring leader in entrepreneurial coaching.
